

#2: GRANNIE + CUSTOMER

EMPLOYEE. Of course. That'll be six thirty-three.

Customer puts her purse on the counter and digs through it, or pats his pockets.

Okay. Let me just find my wallet. It's around here somewhere.

EMPLOYEE. No rush.

CUSTOMER. That's the thing...I'm actually in a bit of a hurry.

EMPLOYEE. Why don't I get your food ready while you look for your wallet? I'll ring you up when I get back.

CUSTOMER. Thanks.

Employee exits just as Grannie enters, walking extremely slowly with a cane, wearing a bright-colored T-shirt and maybe a matching hat that says, "GrubDash." Customer immediately stops looking for wallet.

Ring me up? (Chuckles to herself.) Not today. (Looks at Grannie.) Oh, wow. Look at this. Some old grannie is a GrubDash driver. The way she's going, her customer is going to be waiting a loooonng time for their food.

GRANNIE. I'm a comin'. I'm a comin'.

CUSTOMER. You need some help there, Grannie?

GRANNIE. No, thanks, dearie. I'll get there.

CUSTOMER. Eventually. (Chuckles.) It's called GrubDash, not Grub Crawl.

GRANNIE. Slow and steady wins the race. That's what I always say.

CUSTOMER. I don't think that applies to food deliveries.

GRANNIE. I get my customers their food in plenty of time.

CUSTOMER. I doubt that.

GRANNIE. I'm faster than I look, dearie. I've got moves...trust me.

CUSTOMER. (Laughing.) I'd love to see that.

Employee enters with a bag of food and a drink just as Grannie approaches counter.

EMPLOYEE. Here's your order.

Employee puts bag of food on the counter, then stands ready at screen.

That'll be six thirty-three.

Employee holds out her hand for payment.

CUSTOMER. (Grabbing food bag.) Don't mind if I do.

Customer turns to exit.

EMPLOYEE. Hey! You have to pay for that!

Customer laughs and starts to run toward exit.

CUSTOMER. Yeah, I don't think so.

EMPLOYEE. Someone stop her!

GRANNIE. I've got this!

Grannie picks up cane and holds it in both hands, stopping Customer in her tracks.

CUSTOMER. Oh, please. What are you going to do about it?

GRANNIE. How about this?

Grannie wields cane like weapon as she and Customer battle during the next couple of lines. It is a funny, physical battle, with Grannie surprisingly dominating at every turn.

EMPLOYEE. Whoa! Look at Grannie go!

CUSTOMER. Cut it out! That hurts!

GRANNIE. Pay for your food or Grannie will make you pay!

EMPLOYEE. Yes!

CUSTOMER. How is this happening right now?

GRANNIE. I'm faster than I look.

EMPLOYEE. No kidding! Grannie's putting the dash in GrubDash!

The battle ends with Customer flat on her back, exhausted, and Grannie standing over her, her foot on Customer's chest, her cane raised in victory.

GRANNIE. Slow and steady always wins the race.

CUSTOMER. (Pained.) There was nothing slow and steady about that.

GRANNIE. I told you I've got moves!

Grannie puts cane back on the ground and takes her foot off Customer.
